

Disc Golf Plan

What's happening?

The Vancouver Board of Parks and Recreation (Park Board) is developing a Disc Golf Plan to explore potential improvements to its disc golf courses.

Courses in Queen Elizabeth and Quilchena parks were first established in 1983 and 2002. They are beloved spaces for this community-driven sport that provides year-round recreation to a wide range of ages and abilities.

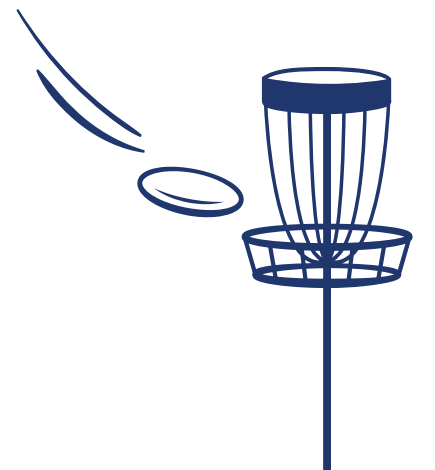

Disc golf is a rapidly growing sport. Rounds of disc golf have steadily increased throughout Vancouver and BC over the last five years. With increasing population in the city and more people spending time in Vancouver's parks, we want to ensure that the improvement and development of disc golf courses support the needs of disc golfers and other park users, now and into the future.

Your feedback will help us understand the needs of the local disc golf community and guide the future of disc golf in Vancouver parks. We want to hear from you about:

- Your current disc golf experiences in Queen Elizabeth and Quilchena parks;
- If course features prevent you from playing; and,
- Your experience of multi-use park spaces shared with disc golf in Queen Elizabeth and Quilchena parks.

Disc Golf Plan

What is disc golf?

Disc golf is a sport where players throw a flying disc toward a metal basket, aiming to complete each “hole” in as few throws as possible.

Courses typically feature multiple holes that wind through a variety of natural obstacles like trees, hills, and across open fields. Players continue throwing from where their disc lands until it reaches the basket, then move on to the next hole.

The goal?

Finish the course with the lowest total number of throws!

Current Vancouver Disc Golf Courses

There are three disc golf courses within Vancouver: two within city parks at Quilchena and Queen Elizabeth parks and a private course on Jericho Lands (closing in the future, with redevelopment). The two closest courses in neighbouring cities: an 18-hole course at Central Park Pitch and Putt in Burnaby (open seasonally), and a year-round 6-hole course currently under redesign in Eastview Park in North Vancouver.
